

Bettina von Zwehl (Photoworks Monograph)

Bettina von Zwehls portraits in series impose exacting conditions on her subjects. She photographs them as they wake from deep sleep, as they hold their breath, as they recover from physical exertion, drenched in rain or listening intently to music in a darkened room. She orchestrates a climate in which they must relinquish control of the way they are represented. The resulting portraits reveal not the conscious projection of an identity but a space between the subjects private and thoughtful world and his or her public appearance. With their pared-down backgrounds and balanced compositions, von Zwehls portraits have the texture and poise of Renaissance paintings. Their stillness arrests the viewer and demands the kind of absorption they depict. The eye is directed to the slightest details: blemishes, wrinkles, stray hairs, raised color in the cheeks, a striking variety of profiles. Surveyed in this comprehensive monograph, Bettina von Zwehls work forms a delicate and exquisitely detailed catalogue of human physiognomy.
